MRS. GOUGAR ON THE WARPATH. the Accuses Mrs. Sewall of Spite Work and Secures an Apology from a Committee.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

CHICAGO, May 19 .- A row among the suffragists of the Woman's Congress took place this morning, and the Indiana public which is acquainted with Mrs. Helen Gongar's aggressive methods will not be surprised to hear that she was instigator and leading participant. Mrs. Gougar is a professional agitator, and when she is temporarily without a great moral cause to labor for she delights to agitate her fellowwoman. Her name does not appear on the week's programme of the Woman's Congress, but she has attended the meetings and has quietly worked up a sentiment in her behalf among her friends over the slight that to-day resulted in an explosion. The information was brought to her that Mrs. May Wright Sewall had added insult to the original injury by issuing an order to the chairmen of the several committees that Mrs. Gougar was not to be permitted to speak in any room. Up to this time she had professed to believe that the general committee was responsible for ignoring her, but Mrs. Sewall's name started her on the warpath. After investigation she found, as she says, that Mrs. Sewall, who is chairman of the committee on arrangements, had issued the

"May Wright Sewall and I," she continued, "are bitter personal enemies, and have been for some time. The trouble arose over prohibition work in Indiana. When I heard that the order had gone forth I did not think of Mrs. Sewall in connection with it, but I did not believe that a committee of women workers would do such a thing. After Mrs. Avery had told me the order had gone out, I looked after matter further, and I found Sewall was responsi-When I learned this I talked the matter over with some of my friends, and they agreed that it was an injustice, but were unwilling to blame the committee. This morning Mrs. Demorest, of New York, representing me, laid the matter before President Bonney in his private office. He called in Mrs. Henrotin, vice president of the association, Mrs. Avery the secretary, and Mrs. Sewall. Mrs. Sewall had little to say, and Mrs. Avery apologized for giving me misinformation.
They agreed that the committee had done nothing of the kind, and I was urged to stay and address the meetings. It is true my name does not appear on the programme, but I was not displeased at that. I am greatly interested in the conference, and have enjoyed myself greatly. I am interested in the congress that meets here in August, and I am very sure that the la-dies, with the exception of Mrs. Sewall, are all on very friendly terms with me."

President Bonney had a hard time trying to pacify the women, but he finally suc-ceeded. On behalf of the auxiliary, responsibility for the order was flatly de-nied, and cordial invitation to participate in the conference was extended to Mrs. Gougar, Mrs. Henrotin went back to her private office, and wrote a letter of ex-planation and an apology, with which Mrs. Gougar afterward expressed herself perfectly satisfied.

"I don't want to pose as a disturber."
said she, "but I had to do something to protect myself. The committee and I are in perfect accord, and the affair would not have occurred, bad it not been for the spite work of Mrs. Sewall.'

The row was the feature of the day, and through it Mrs. Gongar attained the notoriety she sought. The unfriendly feeling between her and Mrs. Sewall grew out of the capture of the Suffrage Association of Indiana by the former. She wished it to become an annex to the W. C. T. U., and Mrs. Sewall desired to have it entirely separate from that organization and its cause. Women Kissed by Old Sol.

CHICAGO, May 19 .- The attendance at the Woman's Congress, to-day, exceeded that of any previous day. Every hall was tilled, and in those where the principal conventions were held the crowds that sought admission would have filled a space as large as that allotted to them. To-day was the last day of the department and special congresses; to-morrow will be devoted to sessions of the general congress only. Day by day the type of women at the congress has grown closer to the average of good society in a large city. Today there were present as many young as elderly women. The gowns were gay in color and modest in cut, and altogether the audience in the different halls could not be distinguished from the average assemblage of women at a theater or a church. There was one drawback. The sun beat down through the glass roof, and all sorts of schemes were tried to evade the ardent gaze of Old Sol, who seemed determined to kiss those ladies, whether they wished it or not. The delegates finally raised umbrellas and parasols wholesale. "I'm sure we will all have to go to hospital to have our faces treated," said

Mrs. Sewall, president of the National Conneil of Women. They were reformers, politicians, great leaders, but they were women, first of all, and a sunburned face was not to be enqured even for the sake of the ballot. A pretty child, the daughter of Rachel Foster Avery, was lifted to the table by Mrs. Sewall, who said: "This is the sort of children we rear in the International Conneil." The hall devoted to the meeting of the National Society of the Daughters of the Revolution was crowded with delegates, intermixed with the curious ones who came to see Letitia Green Stevenson, the President-general and wife of the Vice President of the United States. Mrs. Stevenson wore a handsome costume of brown, and made some interesting remarks that met with great applause. Another particularly large audience was that in which Mrs. M. French Sheldon, the explorer, delivered an address. Household economy, the trades and professions underlying the home, women in missions, in temperance, in church work, in aid and relief work and in trades unions were some of the principal topics discussed in the many sections of the congress. Besides the meetings where papers on these subjects were read and discussed there were department congresses by several organizations. Mrs. Alice May Scudder, in talking about the work of Christian Endeavor societies, said woman's highest attainment is no longer considered to be the arrangement of tableaux or ice-cream festivals, but she was expected to exert a powerful religious

Helen E. Starrett, Laura S. Wilkinson and Jane Adams were the principal speakers in the Columbian Household Economic Association's Department congress. The Association of Collegiate Alumnie, the National Woman Physicians' Association and the Women's Relief Society also held interesting sessions. Mary E. Kenney, Florence Kelley and Susan B. Anthony were notably present in the discussion of women's trade unions, which was a feature of the trade unions, which was a feature of the congress to-night.

Revs. Dr. Henson and Parker, the committee of the Baptist Auxiliary of the Religious Congress, have withdrawn the acceptance of the invitation to the Baptist denomination to participate in the congress. The committee's action is taken in view of the determination of the directory to throw open the gates on Sunday. The committee believes that the Baptist annual meetings to be held next week in Denver will approve the withdrawal.

It was late this evening when the members of the international council settled the cause of their differences-the distribution of offices to the various countries. It was decided that England should have the presidency. America the vice presidency. France one secretary and England one, and the treasurership should go to Finland. It did not take long to elect the following officers: Lady Aberdeen president, May Wright Sewall vice president, Mme, Maria Martin recording secretary, Eva McLaren, England, corresponding secretary. TEMPEST IN A TEAPOT.

Lively Row in Scrosis Over the Rejection of Candidates-Several Women Resign. NEW YORK, May 19 .- The Times says it has just leaked out that there was a lively session of Sorosis at the business meeting last Monday. Mrs. Jennio De ia M. Lozier, the president of the society, was absent, as were the three vice presidents, so Mrs. Fannie I. Helluth, chairman of the executive committee, occupied the chair. Immedistely after roll-call Mrs. Hellath demanded that Mrs. Sarah Kidder, of Chicago, should retire from the meeting. Her reason for making the demand was that Mrs. Kidder was a remote member, and therefore, not entitled to attend the business meetings. This was the beginning of the unpleasantness. Several of the ladies arose and protested against the ruling. one of them making the caustic remark: "Mrs. Kidder has been a member of Sorosis more years than the chairman has, and has quite as much right to attend its meetings. Mrs. Helluth held to her point, and Mrs. Kidder retired, although there were audible expressions of "Sit still," "Don't you go," "She hasn't any business to order you out," all of which was not pleasant for the chairman. As this was to be the last business meeting for several months there was a long list of names to be voted upon for member-ship. The first candidate was Miss Lotta Crabtree. Her name had been proposed by Mrs. Edward E. Kidder and her voucher were Mrs. Sidney Rosenfeld and Mrs. A. M. Palmer. Miss Georgia Cayvan, who is a member of Sorosis, sent a letter enthusiastically recommending Miss Crabtree. It is the custom of Sorosis to discuss the qualifications of a candidate before the name is voted on. The only objection made to Miss Crabtree was that she was an actress, but when the ballot was taken the chairman date is not elected." For a moment there was silence, or as near an approach to it as was possible in a gathering of more than 150 women. Then a long-drawn murmur of dissent and protest ran around the room. Mrs. E. E. Kidder sprang to her teet. She was trembling with excitement. "This is outrageous," she exclaimed, "The most outrageous thing I ever heard of. I resign my membership. I won't belong to an organization that will be guilty of such a

"I am sorry," said Mrs. A. M. Palmer, with flashing eyes, "that Sorosis can be so little, so narrow, so mean. I also resign. I'm ashamed of Sorosis."
Mrs. Rosenfeld declared that the club had offered an insuit to her as a voucher; an insult which she would never forget. One of the members, who seemed to desire peace, proposed a second ballot. Her motion was adopted and a second ballot was taken with the same result as before. When this result was announced the ladies, with the exe ofton of the few who had cast black balls-it only requires five to defeat a candidate-were speechless with rage. They simply sat and glared. Evidently they thought they could not do the subject justice in words.

The chairman hastened to announce the name of the second candidate, Mrs. John Dillon. The usual commendatory letters regarding the candidate were read, the vouchers said their good words and nobody interposed an objection. Yet, when the balloting was concluded, the chairman made the announcement: "The candidate is not elected." There were more bitter remarks, so bitter that the chairman felt called upon to announce that any member of Sorosis had the right to blackball a candidate if she wanted to, and, to quell the storm, the chairman gave the third name on the list of applicants-Mrs. Thaddens B. Wakeman. Mrs. E. B. Foote arose and said that it had been stated in her hearing that Mrs. Wakeman's name should not pass the club. In view of this she requested the member who had proposed Mrs. Wakeman to withdraw her name, "lest Sorosis should further disgrace itself by insulting Mrs. Wakeman as two previous candidates had been insulted." The ladies present were furious when the application of Miss Crabtree was defeated; they were still more furious when Mrs. Dillon was refused, but they were in a condition approaching frenzy when Mrs. Wakeman's name was thus disposed of. The lines of Cushing's manual were forgotten. Many of them jumped to their feet, their cheeks flushing, and with voices pitched much above the ordinary key, spoke vigorously and plainly, without the customary preface. It required all the strength of the president's lungs to make herself heard when she spoke the name of the fourth candidate. This was none other than Miss Alice Carey Croly, called "the granddanghter of Sorosis" because she is the daughter of "Jennie June" Croly, the organizer of Sorosis. "I wish to say," remarked the president, "that Alice Carey Croly was named by Sorosis in honor of its first president. We surely ought to take care of our

A semblance of order having been re-stored it was suggested that it would be a graceful compliment to Mrs. Croly if the club were to set aside its rules and elect Miss Alice by acclamation. Cries of "no. no, no," were uttered by many voices, and chaos reigned again. Custodian of the bal-lot boxes, affected by the excitement, ran about wildly, and, in a number of in-stances, offered the boxes to the same ladies several times. Few seemed to know afterward how many times they voted or whom they voted for, and the great majority are still unaware whether Miss Croly was elected or not, not having heard the announcement of the result, if any was made. It being apparent that order was out of the question for that day at least, the names of other candidates for admission were withdrawn by their proposers and the ladies pressed toward the exits.

hibits of State products, but the Indiane building is intended solely as headquarters for the Indians commissioners and as a clubhouse for visitors. It is the expectation that when citizens of the State come to the fair they will look upon the structure as a haven of refuge; that they will go there for rest when they are tired of sightseeing, that they will meet their friends there, write their letters there, and make themselves at home generally. This expectation may be fulfilled in course of time, but just at present the building is not quite ready for the comfortable reception of visitors, though it is open to the public. It is, in fact, rather too wide open, in a literal sense, for the front doors are not yet hung. The delay in completrag this part of the work has been caused by the failure of a Bedford stone firm to ship the elaborate stone doorways promptly, and as they are making a free contribution to the State of this architectural feature, it has not been possible to hasten their movements as if they were under contract. A gift to the public, as as well as to an individual, sometimes has place, and all will be ready for the dedica-The Indiana building occupies a sightly position and is conveniently near the Fifty-ninth-street entrance. Two of the main buildings are quite near, the Wom-an's Building directly in front, and the are gallery a little to the northeast. On one side is the Illinois State building, and on the other that of California, both so large that they are easily mistaken for main buildings. The Indiana building is not altogether a thing of beauty. Its style of architecture is said by those who profess to know to be of the composite sort, known as "French Gothic." It has two square towers between a semi-circular front, around which is a wide piazza capable of seating two or three hundred people. But, whatever its architectural defects, the building presents a very creditable appearance, and if any fault is found by critical observers the blame must be laid at the doors of a narrow-minded Legislature, which granted a niggardly appropriation for the work. The cost of the building to the State is $50,000, but an additional $15,000 worth of material and labor has been put into it as contributions from individuals. The first floor has a large reception hall and several smaller large reception half and several smaller rooms. Above is a reading room, the offices of the State commission, and what the male members of the board insist upon calling "ladies' parlors," but whose doors bear the misleading legend, "Woman's committee," put there by the women, Perhaps a good way would be to compromise on "women's parlors."

No formal programme has yet been arranged for the dedication, but ex-President Harrison, Governor Matthews and other distinguished Indianians are expected to participate in the ceremonies, and a general invitation to be present will be extended to the Indiana public.

INDIANA'S EDUCATIONAL EXHIBIT.

The State exhibits arranged by the Indiana commission now number three, the educational, agricultural and mines and mining. A fourth, composed of the commercial woods of the State, is being prepared by Purdue University. and will be ready in a few days. Later will be a horticultural and stock exhibit. The educational exhibit is in the southeast corner of the gallery of the Manufactures and Liberal Arts Building, and is in complete order. All the educational exhibits are in this quarter, and but few are fully arranged; but none of those now there can compare in merit and systematic arrangement with that of Indiana. Purdue Uhjversity has a department to itself, and its display is likely to attract much attention. In separate cases is an exhibit of materials, tools and products showing the course of study which the pupil takes in learning processes of manufacture learning processes ing engines and other machinery in electrical engineering and in wood work. Laboratory work is also displayed. There is a fine display of wood carving and decorated china, the work of the pupils. Purdue has one or more special exhibits in the Agricultural Building, but this is an admirable representation of its character as a technical school. The Indiana State Normal School and the State occupied by the Dean of Chester. It smashed the glass and struck the cushion a few inches from the Dean's head. No ar-University have exhibits consisting mainly of a series of photographs of buildings and charts outlining their systems of study.

A large space is devoted to the graded schools. The walls of the compartments are covered with the work of primary pupils and the drawings of more advanced students. Displays from the different towns are arranged separately. On tables are spread books showing the class work of pupils of all ages from all parts of the State, and these are changed from week to week, in order that all may be open to inspection during the season. Cases plainly labeled contain the books not on exhibition at any particular time, and can be examined at any time. The system of education in the public schools being the same Charles de Lesseps, one of the convicted throughout the State, there is, of course, a great uniformity in the work, but certain schools show individual characteristics. The primary work will probably attract most attention from educators, since the Indianapolis and LaPorte schools have attained so much celebrity through the articles of Dr. Rice, in the Forum. The kindergarten system bas never been made aformal part of the instruction in Indianapolis, but it has been quietly incorporated in the regular work until the first and second years of the course use all the best features of the work. The display of this work from Indianapolis is excellent, but is excelled by that of LaPorte, which formally adopted the system some years since. A State law, which is probably not generally known, authorizes any school board to open kindergartens and admit to their instruction children four years of age. This law was passed through the efthe LaPorte echools, and who has had charge of the State exhibit. An interesting feature of the LaPorte exhibit is the proof it shows of the effects of kindergarten work upon advanced pupils in a series of drawings made by beginners, by the same children in intermediate grades. and finally by high school pupils. Hammond, Ind., schools have some characteristics of their own. Literature lessons are illustrated by the pupils according to their own ideas of fitness. "Hiawatha" is taken for the exhibition work, and the books show a variety of talent and originality in the way of comment and illustration. Ten-year-old pupils also make water color drawings from nature. Lafayette, Bedford, Richmond, South Bend Goshen, Edinburg and other towns make
